The College of Business Undergraduate Program's Department is hosting an upcoming workshop titled:

Moves

Our words, actions, and reactions matter.

There's always a next move in business. What will you do?

During this 90-minute workshop, Dr. Cori Wong, Director of the Women & Gender Collaborative, will highlight common examples of gendered micro-aggressions and unconscious bias that negatively impact women-identified individuals in the workplace. Attendees will learn how to recognize subtle sexism while gaining strategies to better advocate for themselves and others. Strategies hail from the popular, evidence based book, "Feminist Fight Club: An Office Survival Manual." This is an inclusive format, and open to everyone in the CSU community.

Date: February 2nd

Time: 11:30 am—1 pm

Location: Bohemian Auditorium (Rockwell West 116)

Please RSVP to Karissa Stolen if you plan on attending or if you have any questions about the event. Karissa.stolen@colostate.edu

Invite a Visible Voices Panel to Your Class

Visible Voices is a popular educational program adapted and coordinated by the GLBT Resource Center (now Pride Resource Center). It has been a valuable educational tool used to inform students about the often times misunderstood issues surrounding gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender youth and their families. Our volunteers have spoken in classrooms, residence halls, churches, and many arenas.

Panels typically consist of two to four people, who are part of the GLBT or ally communities. One of the volunteers will write information on the board about the Pride Resource Center, any pertinent announcements, and the panelists' names.

The panels consist of five separate segments: personal introductions, introduction to the Pride Resource Center, coming out stories, Q & A, and evaluations. This provides a structure for the group we speak with and the panelists.

We distribute blank index cards, and then ask for all of them to be turned in. This helps people feel comfortable asking us questions, and we can be good stewards of the planet by not wasting all of the unused index cards.

Request a panel here:

Panels are scheduled according to your course syllabus/schedule.
