THE OFFICE OF THE VICE PRESIDENT FOR DIVERSITY: 20, 10 in 2020

By Brit Heiring

Along with the excitement of Colorado State University's 150th Birthday, 2020 is also a banner year for the Office of the Vice President for Diversity. The Office will be celebrating not one but two major anniversaries: 10 years as an office and 20 years of the Diversity Symposium.

10 Years of Promoting Inclusion

The Office of the Vice President for Diversity (VPD) will mark 10 years of service to the university this fall. Founded in 2010 with the naming of Mary Ontiveros in the Vice President role, the office has grown to a total of ten full-time professional staff and a dozen facilitation partners across campus, who together impact each area of the university through trainings and initiatives.

With a mission to provide leadership, accountability, and education, the VPD intentionally prioritizes equity at the individual, organizational, and structural levels in order to advance an inclusive university culture in meaningful and holistic ways. This means that initiatives range from individualized trainings all the way up to institution diversity strategic planning at the administrative level.

Current focal areas include training programs such as the Creating Inclusive Excellence Program (CIEP) and the Faculty Institute for Inclusive Excellence, university-wide initiatives such as the Employee Climate Survey and the creation of Institutional Diversity Plans, and events like the Diversity Symposium. Whether advocating on behalf of marginalized students and staff, training on topics that impact the university culture like gender equity, or sharing resources for deeper learning and conversation on racism and whiteness, the staff of the VPD remain dedicated to building an inclusive university community, welcoming and affirming of all.

The Diversity Symposium Celebrates 20 Years

The anniversaries continue into October, when the Office of the Vice President for Diversity will welcome attendees to the 20th Annual Diversity Symposium.

Beginning in 2001 with a one day event, the Diversity Symposium has grown into a week-long conference featuring over 70 hour-long educational sessions relating to diversity and inclusion, cutting-edge research presentations, workshops, and internationally and nationally-renowned keynote speakers.

In addition to longer format talks and sessions, a highlight of the Diversity Symposium is CSU Inspire. This beloved event features five to ten CSU faculty, staff and students in 8-minute long TED talk-like presentations, which focus on engaging and inspiring initiatives at CSU and personal narratives.

The 2019 Diversity Symposium was the largest event yet, with over 3,000 attendees representing every college and Vice President division on campus, as well as representation from faculty, students, state classified, and administrative professional staff.

The Diversity Symposium is free and open to the public and planning is already underway for milestone event. Dates will be announced shortly, along with a call for proposals.

Celebrate with Us!

Celebrations are being planned for the fall semester, including an open house for university community members to tour the near-completed addition to the Diversity House. Keep an eye out for more information to be released later this semester. Thank you for supporting the VPD!

Consider supporting the Office of the Vice President for Diversity during this year's Day of Giving, to be held on March 12 through 13th. The 2020 giving event will last for 1,870 minutes and encourages alumni, friends, faculty, and staff to make a gift to an area on campus that means the most to them.

THE BODY IS NOT AN APOLOGY BOOK STUDY

“Radical self-love is not a destination you are trying to get to; it is who you already are.”

You are invited to book study events for Sonya Renee Taylor’s 2018 work The Body is Not an Apology. The premise of this book goes far beyond the often superficial, consumerist-based notions of body positivity to the heart of radical self-love. It challenges us to acknowledge how we have participated in violence towards our own bodies and the bodies of others. The format is 90 minutes total, with 30 minutes of reading and discussion of the chapter and 60 minutes vocalizing answers to the “Unapologetic Inquiry” questions. Mondays, from 6-7:30pm. Locations TBA. Please come with written answers to the Unapologetic Inquiries:

- March 2nd: Chapter Three discussion
- March 9th: Chapter Four discussion
- March 16th: Chapter Five discussion- come with written answers to the Unapologetic Inquiries AND ideas on how to implement toolkit from chapter

THE JOURNALISM AND MEDIA COMMUNICATION DIVERSITY COMMITTEE PRESENTS:

FROM HUMAN ZOOS TO SLUM TOURS: THE EVOLUTION OF ZOOLOGY IN TRAVEL MEDIA

While dehumanizing exhibitions of exotified communities have taken place since Roman times, they took on a more entertaining function at the peak of human zoos in the early 19th century, where Black and Indigenous people were primarily put on display like souvenirs brought back from the journeys of imperial expansionists. Today, “slum tours” from The Bronx to Brazil and even more sustainable-touted treks carry on the zoological legacy of voyeurism of a Native/stolen people in their “natural” habitats. In this lecture, travel writer Bani Amor will interrogate the durable aesthetics of the white supremacist gaze in travel media and the danger of seeking “authentic” tourist experiences.

Public Lecture, Wednesday, March 4 from 1:00 to 2:30 in LSC 324.

Presenter: Bani Amor

Bani Amor is a gender/queer travel writer who explores the relationships between race, place, and power. Their work has appeared in CNN Travel, Fodor’s, AFAR, and Teen Vogue, among other outlets. They also have work in the anthology Outside the XY: Queer Black and Brown Masculinity, and in the upcoming Where We Stand: Black and Brown People Speak the Earth. Bani is a four-time VONA/Voices Fellow. Follow them on Twitter @bani_amor and on Instagram at @baniamor.

Full-time CSU employees may be eligible for a 50% discount on tuition, reducing the cost to $37.50 for an individual course, or $63.50 when registering for both. For more information, please click here.
